

Means and ends in the history of science

Tuesday, July 15, 2025 9:55 AM (25 minutes)

Twentieth-century historiography of science was often characterized by a conflict between internalism and externalism. Comparing two fundamental historical alternatives, I will examine the role of the means of research in mediating the external determination of the internal ends of science.

Presenter: MCLAUGHLIN, Peter

Session Classification: Modes and Material Conditions of Evolution of Knowledge